Inclusive Leadership Self-Assessment

The Inclusion Edit
Capacity. Capability. Change.

Reflect on your practice across four dimensions of inclusive leadership, and leave with a clear picture of your strengths and where to grow.

Self-assessment About 15 minutes Updated October 2026

HOW TO USE THIS

1. Rate yourself honestly on each of the 12 questions, from Never (0) to Always (4).
2. Use the example under each question to guide your thinking.
3. Add up each section out of 12, then your overall score out of 48.
4. Finish with your insights and one or two commitments.

1. Awareness and Mindset

Three questions; score this section out of 12.

1 Do I create space for all voices, especially those who are underrepresented, to be heard and valued?

For example: I intentionally pause in meetings and invite introverted or marginalised colleagues to contribute without putting them on the spot.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

2 Am I aware of how my own identity, privilege, or biases influence my decisions?

For example: Before choosing someone for a project, I ask myself whether I am selecting them based on familiarity or actual suitability.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

3 Do my actions match my stated commitment to equity and inclusion?

For example: I review workloads and opportunities to ensure diverse staff are not being overlooked or overburdened.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

Awareness and Mindset score: _____ out of 12

2. Communication and Inclusion

Three questions; score this section out of 12.

4 Have I adapted my communication style to meet the needs of different team members?

For example: I offer information in multiple formats: written, verbal, and visual, to support neurodiverse staff and different learning preferences.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

5 Do I actively remove barriers rather than expecting employees to fit in to existing systems?

For example: When a staff member discloses a need, I explore adjustments immediately, rather than encouraging the staff member to make changes.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

6 Am I transparent and fair in how I allocate opportunities, recognition, and progression pathways?

For example: I use clear criteria and salary transparency for promotions and openly share them so everyone knows what success looks like.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

Communication and Inclusion score: _____ out of 12

3. Safety and Accountability

Three questions; score this section out of 12.

7 Do I respond appropriately when exclusionary behaviour or microaggressions occur?

For example: I address the situation promptly, name what happened, and support the affected person rather than staying silent.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

8 Have I built psychological safety so staff feel comfortable speaking up or offering dissenting views?

For example: I thank people for raising concerns and avoid penalising honest feedback.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

9 Do I seek feedback from employees, especially underrepresented groups, and act on it?

For example: After gathering insights, I make visible changes and explain what has been implemented and why.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

Safety and Accountability score: ____ out of 12

4. Learning and Modelling

Three questions; score this section out of 12.

10 Am I continuously learning about inclusion, equity, intersectionality, and diverse lived experiences?

For example: I attend training, read widely, and reflect on how structural inequities show up in the workplace.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

11 Do I model inclusive behaviour in everyday interactions?

For example: I honour how people choose to identify, treat everyone with dignity, and show consistent allyship through my words and actions.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

12 Do I recognise when different employees have different starting points, needs, or barriers, and respond with flexibility?

For example: I offer flexible hours or workload adjustments during flare-ups, caring responsibilities, or sensory overwhelm.

◯ Never (0) ◯ Rarely (1) ◯ Sometimes (2) ◯ Often (3) ◯ Always (4)

Learning and Modelling score: ____ out of 12

WHAT YOUR SECTION SCORES MEAN

Section score	Where you are
0 to 4	Developing
5 to 7	Building
8 to 10	Practising
11 to 12	Leading

YOUR OVERALL SCORE

Total: _____ out of 48

Overall	What it suggests
0 to 16	You are in the early stages of developing inclusive leadership skills. Focus on the questions where you scored lowest.
17 to 32	You are building a solid foundation. Identify two or three areas to deepen your practice.
33 to 44	You are practising inclusive leadership consistently. Look for opportunities to model and mentor others.
45 to 48	You are leading inclusively at a high level. Keep learning and challenge yourself to go further.

My key insights from this assessment

What patterns do you notice? Where do you feel most confident? Where do you want to grow?

My commitment going forward

What one or two things will you commit to changing or improving in the next quarter?

Who will I ask to hold me accountable?

What makes leadership inclusive?

Inclusive leadership is not a personality trait or a fixed style: it is a set of deliberate practices that can be learned, developed, and assessed. Research identifies key behaviours that distinguish inclusive leaders: they are curious about difference, actively seek out perspectives unlike their own, and create environments where team members feel they can contribute fully.

Inclusive leaders are also visible in their commitment. They do not treat EDI as a separate strand of work: they integrate it into everyday decisions, challenge behaviour that undermines inclusion, and use their positional power to advocate for people who have less of it. This combination of personal commitment and structural action is what makes inclusive leadership distinctive.

Self-assessment is a starting point, not an endpoint. The most useful outcome of a reflection like this is not a score but a specific set of commitments: the two or three things you will do differently in the next quarter, and the person or group you will ask to hold you accountable.

Using this with your managers: if your training is not sticking, ask each manager to complete this privately, then discuss the patterns as a group rather than the individual scores.
